Glutathione reductase is inactivated by mercuric ions by a mechanism different from that proposed for the reaction of rat and bovine erythrocyte glutathione reductase with Hg<sup>2+</sup>. Both in rat and bovine erythrocyte glutathione reductase, the inactivation process proceeds via the formation of an enzyme-mercury complex (Et<sub>3</sub>Sn-1)3Hg+ (Et<sub>3</sub>Sn-3Hg+), the formation of which requires the activity of an external enzyme, mercuric-dependent phosphatase (Agrum-1). The inactivation of rat erythrocyte glutathione reductase by Hg<sup>2+</sup> is accompanied by the formation of a stable covalent derivative (Et<sub>3</sub>Sn-3Hg+). Cytosolic glutathione reductase from rat liver is also inactivated by mercuric ions. It appears that the inactivation by Hg<sup>2+</sup> of glutathione
