This study aimed to assess dentists' awareness of oral cancer and knowledge of emergency management. A questionnaire was applied to 470 dentists to measure their awareness of oral cancer symptoms and their knowledge of an emergency situation related to oral cancer. The subjects were also asked about their experience with oral cancer. According to the results, the number of dentists who were aware of oral cancer increased with increasing age. The percentage of the dentists who were aware of the early symptoms of oral cancer was approximately 90%, and the proportion of the dentists who could recognize a possible mass in the mouth as a symptom of oral cancer was approximately 77% (No.1). The proportion of the dentists who knew the correct response in an emergency was approximately 93%, and approximately 76% could correctly respond to a severe bleeding symptom (No.2).

Moreover, the dentists who had treated patients with oral cancer had a higher level of awareness of oral cancer than those who had not ( $\chi^2 = 21.80$ , P Pages Tuesday, July 23, 2010 I'm a dedicated vegan, and that's often the case with most vegans I know. We're committed to living a vegan lifestyle as much as we can, at least for the animals. Most of us aren't ever going to be able to just go out and buy vegan food in the grocery store, but thankfully there are options everywhere. For me, this means I have to spend a lot of time
